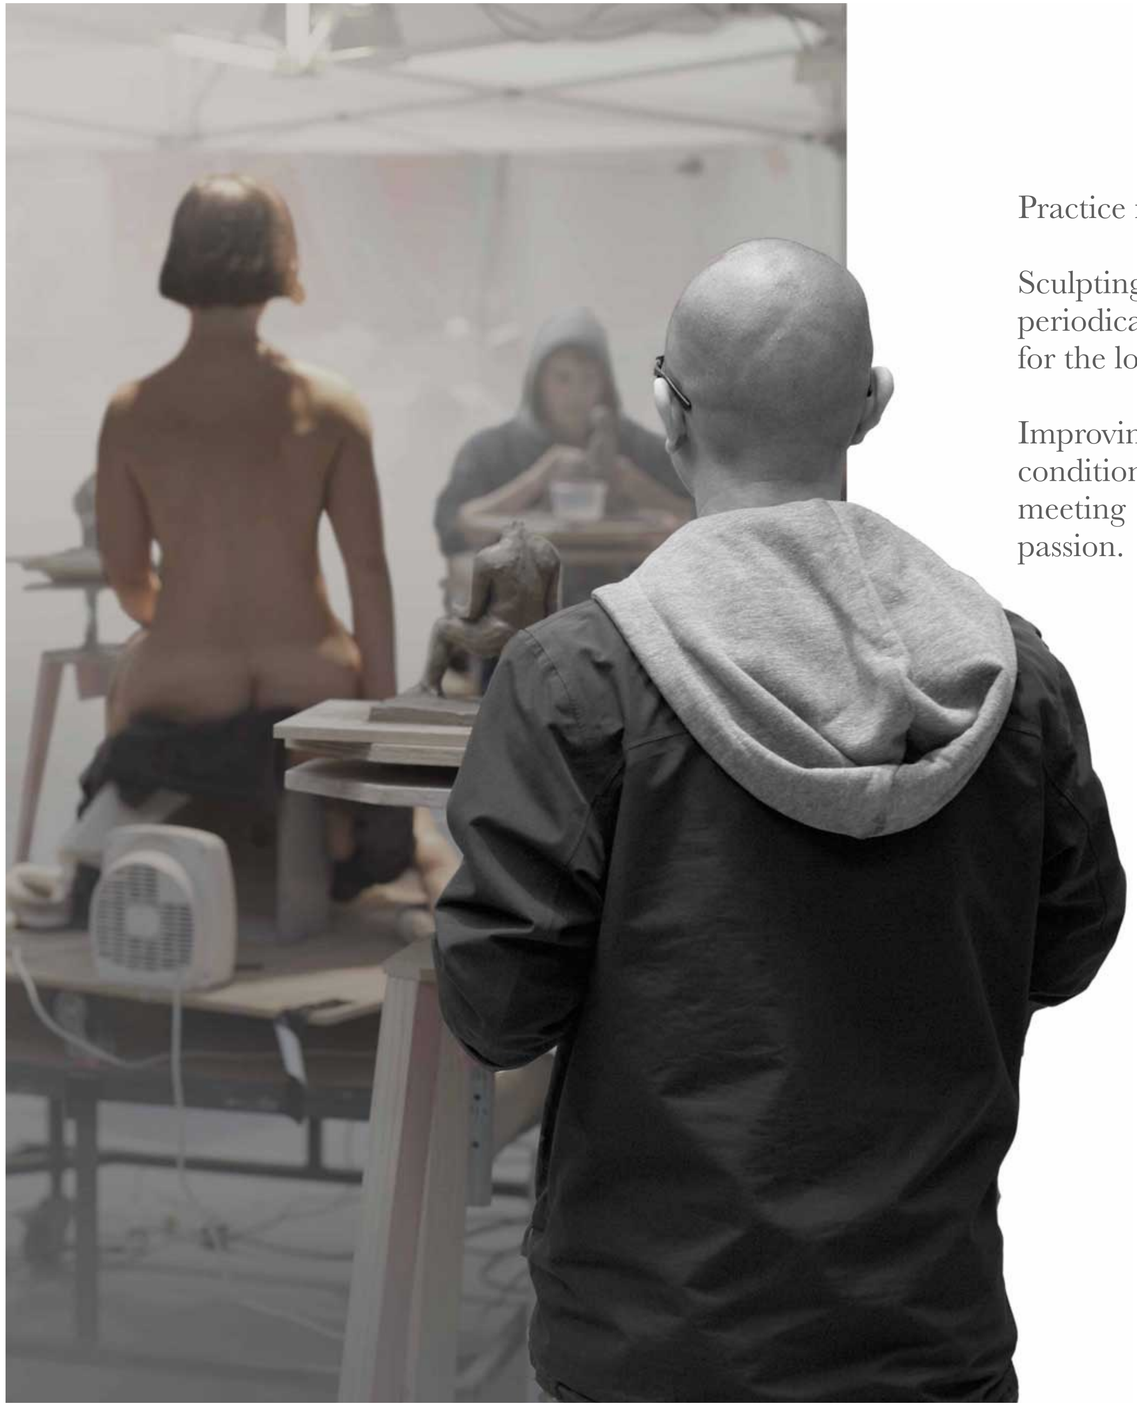
What is the practice about?



Practice makes the master!

Sculpting the human figure in clay from a live model periodically, provides an excellent opportunity of practice for the local artist community.

Improving sculpting performance in the best scenario and conditions to learn, but also works as a plattaform for meeting each other, and share the joy of a common passion.

What can you do?

During the uninstructed open studio sessions, you can be free to practice whatever you want/ need to, counting on your own stool and 4 hours with a different live model pose that vary every week.

Who is this for?

- Beginning or experienced sculptors.
- Graphic and digital artists looking to improve their 3 dimensional visual understanding also involved into the drawing, illustration and/ or painting of the gesture.

Working with models

Working with a live model has the advantage of study the human body in a static long pose 360 degrees, being able to improve the multisensorial understanding needed to recreate a life like figure, and the nonverbal communication involved in a pose.

Joining a friendly and relaxed work environment that enhances both, individual and group learning processes, and stimulates periodical practice.

Accessing to connect with art community and network development for personal projects.
